

The Carriage House

*John Burnside
(1810-1881)*

James Gallier's 1860 design for John Burnside's Carriage House

John Burnside, an Irish immigrant, purchased the Houmas from the estate of Wade Hampton in 1858 for $1,000,000. The Houmas was the largest sugar plantation in America. The following year, John Burnside purchased the famed Garden District villa of James Robb for $55,000. The villa became known as Burnside Place. Mr. Burnside owned 10 of the most valuable plantations in Louisiana and became known as the Sugar Prince of Louisiana and his Houmas became The Sugar Palace. James Gallier, famed Irish architect of New Orleans, designed a pair of carriage houses for Mr. Burnside in 1860. The Gallier designs were not built, but the original designs survived in the archives of New Orleans. Over 150 years later, the Gallier façade is finally constructed at Houmas as the façade of "The Carriage House". The great pair of 1850's New Orleans gilt mirrors sit atop the carved marble mantles, reflecting the Irish appointments of the Ballroom. In the tradition of Old Louisiana Dining, Executive Chef Joseph Dicapò has created menus that will delight and please the finest of guests, and present you with an experience rivaling those of the great Sugar Barons of the 1800s.
